SAVING THE ORANG UTAN POLICY

Sime Darby Plantation recognises that the protection and conservation of endangered and protected species is an essential responsibility that must be shouldered throughout our operations.

Our commitment in the protection and conservation of endangered and protected species is demonstrated through:

- Proper planning of sustainable land use to prevent forest or habitat fragmentation and subsequent isolation of protected species
- Ensuring compliance with all regulatory requirements
- Educating and creating awareness about the conservation of endangered and protected species to all employees and stakeholders through courses and trainings
- Supporting local, national and international efforts in the conservation of endangered and protected species through involvement or implementation of related strategies
- Establishing, communicating and implementing responsible and practical measures to resolve human-wildlife conflict within our operations
- Prohibiting hunting activities throughout our plantation operations by educating our employees and stakeholders on hunting legislation, implementing penalties for any offences and undertaking efforts to control access to hunting
